Victoria Boy Is Hurt in Vancouver

Canadian Press
Vancouver, July 25.—Johnny Lindsay, a boy of ten, was hurt today when a cherry tree in a yard in Victoria, high up into a tree in an attempt to reach a cherry. The boy fell to the ground, broke his leg and injured a number of ribs which were bruised. Johnny is in hospital, but is not seriously injured.

FIVE BOYS DIE IN HOUSE FIRETragedy in Indian Family on Reserve Near Sarnia, Ont.

Canadian Press
Sarnia, Ont., July 25.—Five Indian children were killed today in a fire that destroyed the two-story frame dwelling of their father, Thomas White, on the Sarnia Indian Reserve, about four miles southeast of this city.
The victims are: John Benjamin White, twelve; Leroy, ten; Earl, eight; Reynold, six; and Milton, four.
White, thirty-six, his wife, thirty-three, and their two-year-old daughter, Verlyn, escaped, but White and his wife were severely burned.
The fire broke out on the second floor, where the boys were sleeping. It is believed a lighted lantern was overturned.
White and his wife were awakened by screams of Verlyn. The mother called to John, who rushed downstairs and then returned in an attempt to rescue his brothers. He was trapped with them and perished.
The mother succeeded in dragging Reynold downstairs and carried him three-quarters of a mile to the home of a neighbor. The boy died in her arms as she arrived.
It was decided an inquest was unnecessary.

BIG CHIEF FLYING EAGLE NOW

It is stated none of the many honors showered on General Italo Balbo at Chicago pleased him more than his adoption by the Sioux Indians now at the Century of Progress Exposition. The picture above was taken while Chief Black Horn was conferring the chief's name and headdress on the Italian plane squadron leader, Gen. Balbo's Sioux name, appropriately enough, is Chief Flying Eagle.

Henderson Not To Be Candidate

London, July 25.—Rt. Hon. Arthur Henderson, veteran Labor leader, former Foreign Secretary of Great Britain and now chairman of the Disarmament Conference, has declined to allow his name to be submitted for nomination as Labor candidate in the forthcoming by-election in the Claycross division of Derby.

Marketing Board Costs Discussed

Canadian Press
London, July 25.—"We are anxious to continue the work of the Empire Marketing Board, but we are not prepared to continue feeding the baby," declared Rt. Hon. J. H. Thomas, Secretary for Dominions, in the Commons yesterday.
Mr. Thomas had previously explained the United Kingdom was seeking financial assistance from Dominion governments if the operations of the Empire Marketing Board were to be continued. The United Kingdom had borne all the cost of the work, devoted to furthering sales of British Empire goods in Britain, said Mr. Thomas, but after conceding imperial preferences the government felt Britain should no longer have to bear the entire cost of the board.

MUST BORROW ON INSURANCEPersons on Relief in Vancouver Who Have Policies Given Instructions

Vancouver, July 25.—The general policy that a relief recipient who has an insurance policy must realize on at least a portion of its loan value was announced by the Vancouver City Council at a special meeting yesterday. Although the aldermen agreed each case would have to be considered separately on its merits, it was conceded the decision made in one case yesterday would be generally accepted as a precedent.
The case was that of a fifty-year-old man with an eight-year-old $3,000 policy. The loan value is $600. City relief officials asked him to borrow $300 on it. So far, he has not completed arrangements. The balance of $300 in the policy, it was said, would prevent the policy from lapsing and pay for loan interest for about three years.
Relief Officer W. R. Bone declared that up to the present, relief recipients had not actually been required to borrow on insurance, but that "strong suggestions" had been made to them that such action could be taken.

MONEY IN BANK

Aldermen adopted the attitude the situation was analogous with the case of a relief applicant who has money in the bank. Such persons are not given relief as long as they have funds. The aldermen argued the loan value of an insurance policy was in the same category as a bank account and the groups should be treated alike.

CHARGE ON CITY

Indignation was expressed by aldermen at reports of the provincial policy on transients who are incapable of working. It has been ruled that these persons, regardless of domicile, are civic charges. One instance was cited of a sixty-nine-year-old Calgary man who came here last November, is now in a hospital as a city charge and may become a permanent liability on the city. Civic authorities wish the government to assume costs in such cases, but it was decided first to ask the city law department to report on the situation.

SCHEME CONTINUED

Anticipating continuation of the present basis of governmental contribution toward relief costs in Vancouver, the council instructed the relief department to maintain its present relief arrangements. The present system was scheduled to expire July 31, but civic officials are confident it will be continued. The city, province and Dominion share equally the cost of married persons' relief.
Civic authorities to-day reaffirmed their decision not to bear cost of administration of single men and single women on relief in Vancouver. The province asked the city to bear administration costs. At present the entire expense is borne by the governments.

NEW PROBLEM FOR COTTON MULES

Associated Press
Johnsboro, Ga., July 25.—The mules that drag the ploughs which make the crop in the land of cotton are reluctant about co-operating in the United States government's acreage reduction programme.

For self-respecting mules cotton stalks might as well bear a sign, "Don't tread on me." No mule of any standing at all would deliberately "stomp" down a cotton stalk. They have been trained for generations to walk between the rows. Now that some of the farmers are ploughing under their crop, they are having difficulties about getting their motive power on the row.
The mules want to follow their early training. The longer legged ones have solved the problem by walking spraddle-legged.

LEON TROTZKY NOW IN FRANCE

Marseilles, France, July 25.—Leon Trotsky and his wife secretly disembarked here yesterday from the steamer Bulgaria, which stopped outside the port. It was reported this was done to avoid an attack or a demonstration at Marseilles.

The exiled Russian revolutionary was taken to Castille, fifteen miles away. From there, it was reported, he started by automobile for central France.

Austrian Papers Reduce Headlines

Associated Press
Vienna, July 25.—Austria's evening papers appeared on the streets yesterday stripped of their glaring headlines in accordance with the government's anti-sensation decree published at the week-end.

The longest banner lines were seven inches and the biggest type was thirty-six point. All headlines strictly conformed to the text.
None of the papers commented on this sudden change except the semi-official Reichspost, which exulted that newspapers had been compelled to discard "the carnival dress of the post-war period" and to return to "civilian clothes."
Seven papers with Hitlerite leanings ceased publication altogether.

SOVIET FOOD CONTROL TOLDMachine Farming in Russia Praised By U.S. Agriculturist in Regina Talk

Canadian Press
Regina, July 25.—Root of the Soviet Government's power over the nation rests in its control of the supply of food, declared E. J. Stirnman, of Brooklyn, Iowa, in an address at a public meeting here yesterday evening sponsored by the Canadian Society of Technical Agriculturists, which held its annual meeting here yesterday.

Long a student of conditions in Russia, which he studied during work there, Mr. Stirnman described the growth and developments of the mechanization of farming under Soviet guidance. Control of food supply was vital to the government, a minority party, to retain power, he declared.
The Five-Year Plan had been a success in so far as it had introduced to Russia mechanized farming and the manufacture of farm machinery. It had failed to put grain production by machinery on a sound economic basis, he declared. "The Soviet Government cannot possibly make foreign-bought machinery pay as long as they allow it to depreciate so rapidly," he said.

Mr. Stirnman emphasized the obstacle, which he said was to development of agriculture in Russia. The food supply had fallen off in quantity since 1928. "A plan for economic development in Russia is absolutely necessary because the stamping out of individualism has eliminated conscious effort toward progress," Mr. Stirnman said. "And it is imperative the plan set the goal a little high."

Policies of the Soviet were being reflected in China, he said. "China would like to try some modern farming herself," he added. "To the Soviet will go the credit for the largest development of machine farming in all Europe and for the introduction of machinery in Asia."

TAX COLLECTIONS GAIN

Calgary, July 25 (Canadian Press).—If Calgary's tax collections are any criterion, conditions are improving. City heads report tax collections to date total $72,533, compared with $45,016 at this time last year.

New Super Shell developed in the West —without former 3¢ premium

In Cleveland where sales more than doubled, in fact in hundreds of cities from Boston to Honolulu, motorists are changing to the new Super Shell without the former 3¢ premium.

This new Super Shell gasoline produced in the West brings you the same premium Super Shell mileage, flashing pick-up, and surging power that easterners paid over eight million extra dollars for. It gives you a higher anti-knock value than any other gasoline at the same price. Plus easier starting.

These improvements are due to Shell's refining methods on the Pacific Coast by which wasteful parts are removed economically from petroleum. The gassy parts that cut down mileage, the sluggish parts that slow up starting and getaway, these are all eliminated. Super Shell is composed entirely of working units. It's concentrated.

That's why this gasoline makes such a difference in any car—why millions are changing to it. Try it today.

FATE WAS UNKIND TO THE FLYING MOLLISONS

The flying Mollissons naturally are very disappointed that fate cheated them out of the triumph of which they were in sight when their machine crashed at Bridgeport on Sunday evening. They had been in the air for approximately thirty-nine hours, much of the time over the Atlantic, and had successfully fought a variety of adverse climatic conditions. But it is fortunate that nothing more important than their plane lies wrecked. With the exception of comparatively minor injuries, husband and wife are little the worse for their experience, and they probably soon will be on the wing again.

The Mollissons had hoped to establish three records—the first Great Britain to New York flight; the first two-way crossing of the Atlantic; and a new non-stop straight-line mark. They were only sixty miles away from their first objective when sheer physical exhaustion and uncertainty of fuel supply forced them to the premature landing which might have ended fatally for them both. They may find consolation in the fact that they have added three records to their joint achievements. Captain Mollisson is the first airman to make the east-to-west crossing of the Atlantic twice in a heavier-than-air machine. Mrs. Mollisson is the first woman to make the trip in this direction. It is the first time husband and wife have flown the Atlantic together.

The accomplishments of these two intrepid aviators during the last three years are so well known that it is not necessary to expatiate upon them here. Both are in the top class by their own individual right; as a flying combination they stand by themselves. All will hope that if they try for other victories the fates will be kind to them, for in their case a disaster to either would mean the end of what has all the appearance of a delightful romance.

THE TARIFF BOARD NOW IN HARNESS

From Ottawa the other day came a dispatch announcing that the new Tariff Board has begun to function "in democratic simplicity," with no complimentary observations to or from the bench. It began on a small list of cases, all appeals from rulings of customs officials.

The first important job which the new body will tackle will be the claim of the British woolen manufacturers for preferential access to the Canadian market. The right of appeal was included in the trade agreement reached by Canada and Great Britain at the Ottawa conference last year. Meetings between Canadian and British interests have been taking place for some time and when the British case is complete the London government will transmit it to the Ottawa government; then it will go to the Tariff Board.

The general undertaking of this country is that it will see that protective duties shall not exceed such a level as will give United Kingdom producers full opportunity for reasonable competition on the basis of relative costs. The members of the Tariff Board will have to determine these costs of production, including wages of labor, and so on. This will be a difficult and delicate task. As the Montreal Star observes, it is hard enough to determine domestic costs of production with accuracy; it will be harder still to compare domestic with British costs. For example, in a typical industry, Canadian labor receives much higher wages per man than British, but the Canadians also run many times more machines per man. Thus the Board will have to say what is the comparative cost of labor content in a given article.

The Tariff Board is a fact-finding body. It will hear what all applicants have to say and pass the information along to the government. Nor is it empowered to make any recommendations, a function specifically vested in the Board which operated under the King administration.

GIVING CITY WORKERS A CHANCE TO FARM

It has been said many times that the man who has a few acres of land under cultivation and is able to grow the food he requires for himself and his family is only lightly touched by periodical economic recessions.

This fact seems to have prompted the Roosevelt administration to experiment in what it calls "subsistence farming" for industrial workers on the fringes of big cities. A fund of $25,000,000 is available for this purpose.

Under the plan already evolved land will be obtained on the edge of a city and will be subdivided into small farms of one, two or three acres. A small home at a moderate cost will be established on each plot. In the middle of the colony will be a store, a playground, a social hall, and so on.

Occupants of these homes will be industrial workers from the city. Each family will have sufficient land to raise vegetables, chickens, and a little fruit—and, possibly, to keep a cow. In other words, these workers will not only get the benefits of fresh air, open country life, and other enjoyment unobtainable in cramped areas; they will be far more independent of the uncertainties of industrial life than other workers can possibly be under ordinary conditions.

For example, if the factory employing one of these men should shut down, he and his family would not starve. He would have to go very carefully, of course, but he would raise his own food and be able to stave off the spectre of hunger. Moreover, while at work he would have the same source of food supply, and he would not have to spend as much on his day-to-day expenses. He would be more secure in every way.

Some phases of the Roosevelt scheme may prove impractical. But the whole conditions of life have changed in recent years and old methods of meeting these conditions are equally impractical. After all, $25,000,000 is not a great sum for the United States to spend on an experiment which can not be a complete failure, but which may turn out to be a great success.

The operation of this scheme will be watched with a great deal of interest by Canadians—rural and urban workers alike.

ADVICE THE PRIME MINISTER SHOULD HAVE TAKEN

Speaking at Brandon last night, Mr. MacKenzie King said if he were given the opportunity to form another administration, he would establish a great national unemployment commission.

At the session of 1931, again at that of 1932 and this year, Mr. King urged the government to tackle this issue as if it really wanted to ameliorate conditions, by appointing a competent, impartial national body which could study the question from its numerous angles and suggest a course of action.

Mr. Bennett's specific for unemployment was higher tariffs. It has failed miserably. The blank cheque policy of meeting the emergency has been far from satisfactory. The uncertainty of its operation has caused economic chaos in the provinces and in the municipalities.

BARNUM FLATTERED HIS PUBLIC

The assistant vice-president of the Canadian National Telegraphs, Mr. D. E. Galloway, has given what The Toronto Globe correctly describes as "kindly, timely warning" to those people who have not heard of that venerable gentleman, the "Spanish prisoner." Our contemporary observes that "evidently the time has not arrived when it is unnecessary to protect the public against its own folly." We quote from The Globe:

Mr. D. E. Galloway, assistant vice-president in charge of the Canadian National Telegraphs, warns the public that urgent appeals are being made to Canadians by individuals supposed to be imprisoned under the Spanish Bankruptcy Act. The sum of $360,000 awaits them in America if they can but pay the court expenses and secure their discharge; but, of course, they have not the cash on hand. One-third of this $360,000 is offered to any one who will cable enough money to fix things up in Spain and enable the liberated victims to return to America.

Mr. Galloway, in a circular recently issued, points out that, as a company operating a means of communication for the public, the National Telegraphs System must accept such cable messages should the sender insist; but, in justice to the public, he feels obliged to call attention to the fraudulent nature of the appeal.

There should be general appreciation of this eminently just attitude. Notwithstanding loss of revenue involved in this warning, Mr. Galloway regards it as a responsibility of the Canadian National Telegraphs to protect those who appear willing to be victimized by this hoary hoax. His action in making public the nature of such appeals is highly commendable.

From time to time letters arrive in Victoria from the poor unfortunate who has a fortune tucked away in a secret pocket of a portmanteau—"somewhere in Spain." Evidently there are people who still succumb to the ruse. The desire for easy money is a common failing. But there is a serious side to all this bunco business. The confidence men of wallet fame are notorious. They continue to get their victims. The chain-letter fiends are not much less obnoxious. Many who have broken the chain have brooded and have even committed suicide through remorse. But it ought to be understood now that as countless gullible generations have tried to get this notorious "Spanish prisoner" out of his dungeon he will remain incarcerated as long as money flows his way.

WHAT OTHER PAPERS SAY

RECOVERY IN CANADA The New York Times

Evidence of widespread improvement of business in Canada is noted by several official agencies. The wholesale price index of the Dominion Bureau of Statistics reached 67.8 in June, compared with 63.8 in February. This is a gain of 6.3 per cent in three months, or progress at the rate of about 20 per cent for a full year. As in our own case, the sharpest recovery has been made in those commodities, principally farm products, which had previously suffered most severely from deflation. Security prices have also advanced, at a much more rapid pace, and the average value of 130 common shares has increased by more than 50 per cent since March.

RUSSIA PLAYS FOOTBALL The Vancouver Sun

Cabling from Moscow, Robert Cromie tells of visiting a horse race and a football match in the Russian city. The football stadium accommodated 50,000. More than 500,000 clamored for admittance.

Everywhere the Russians are sport mad. All sorts of games are engrossing their attention.

Whatever may be their political status or their economic future, there cannot be very much wrong with a people who are devoted to sport.

Certainly the somewhat macabre diversions of the old Russia cannot be missed by a nation that is crowded by the half millions to see a football game.

The soundness of any country is not measured so much by its political, economic and social institutions, as by what is in the hearts of its people.

A sport loving nation is a wholesome nation. Russia may be wrong, but Russians seem to be right.

A THOUGHT

Tremble, ye women that are at ease; be troubled, ye careless ones; strip you, and make you bare, and gird sackcloth upon your loins.—Isaiah xxxiii 11.

If you are idle you are on the road to ruin; and there are few stopping places upon it. It is rather a precipice than a road.—Becher.

Loose Ends

A bright evening at our lake—but very dull when it comes to writing a column—on the larger aspects of life—which could better be ignored—when the sun goes down—and the catfish are being dissected.

By H. B. W.

DEADLY STUFF

THIS IS A ridiculous time to think of serious things. If I were an efficient and systematic fellow, such as you, no doubt, would be if you were running this job, I should have written a column in advance and left it in town. Then I should be able to float about the lake yonder until the dusk, instead of laboring here on the veranda, far into the night. It is a ridiculous time to think of serious things, but, curiously, serious things are much easier to think about, much easier to make a column of, than silly things; and to-night, it seems, we need a column at all costs. Even at the cost of being serious.

Well, sitting by the lake to-day and admitting to myself that perhaps the island is as good a place as the Cariboo after all, sitting thus in splendid solitude, save for swarms of motor-boats and a red airplane befouling the air and rending the silence with hideous sound, and the little girl from next door trying to strangle me in her spare moments—sitting thus, I say, I have been trying to catch up with the wagging of the world, which got quite beyond me during my holidays. It is a grim task, but at last I think I can make a little sense out of part of it. I find that something of almost breathless importance is going on, just south of the forty-ninth parallel.

IN FOR IT

I HARDLY THINK it has kept into the minds of Canadians. Americans themselves are just beginning to realize what they are in for. They are just beginning to realize that almost without notice, certainly without expecting anything of the sort, they have plunged into an experiment as great as that of the Russian Five-year Plan, with results equally important to human beings. And, as usual, the public has got the wrong slant on it.

Vaguely the public got the idea that Roosevelt's programme had started to bring back prosperity, and merrily it started to wade into the stock market as of old. The stock market got far ahead of the improvement of business and the usual crash followed. Actually, the improvement in business so far has had little to do with Roosevelt's programme and, ironically enough, is working against it in a fashion. That is to say, manufacturers are breaking their necks to speed up production now, because they know that the Roosevelt programme, by making them pay decent wages, will increase costs later on. The interesting result is that industry may pile up stocks which the public, lacking increased wages, may be unable to absorb, and then we shall have another slump. It is a race between Roosevelt trying to raise wages along with prices, and greedy capitalists trying to chisel an extra profit, even if it busts the whole show.

This is extremely interesting to us, for whether we like it or not, we are all caught up in the flood of the new attempt to save capitalism from suicide. Russia is far away. We can keep clear of Russian Communism. But we can't keep clear of neighbors who live next door, who are our best customers, whose investments are inextricably mixed up with our own. If Roosevelt's system of controlling industry through government succeeds, this country will copy it. Whatever our politicians may say, however they may cover it up with new names to hide the fact that they are swallowing all their old policies, this country will in some system similar to that which puts the United States on its feet.

WHO KNOWS?

WELL, WHAT is going to happen down there? Apparently no one knows. Either it is going to be a magnificent success, the most remarkable feat of statesmanship in our time, or it is going to be a failure which will leave us worse than ever. Donald R. Heintzberg, counsel for the United States government in its recovery programme, says that this is capitalism's last chance to vindicate itself. In other words, if it doesn't co-operate with the President, if it doesn't agree on reasonable operating conditions, controlled production and adequate wages, "it will be the failure of this industrial system. There is no choice presented between the private and public election of the directors of industry. . . . If they fumble their great opportunity, they may find it gone forever."

Strong words, these, coming direct from the government; and General Johnson, in charge of the recovery programme, says there may be another collapse if industry doesn't co-operate.

"I shudder," he says, "to think what would happen in this country if we had another." The New Republic, whose economics have been just about right ever since the depression started, says solemnly that Roosevelt is a "well-meaning liberal who may easily be defeated by unregenerate capitalists in his effort to enlist their co-operation for the benefit of the masses. If such a liberal fails, the future will lie between the red Russian and the yellow cat." That is the point. There are only three alternatives—some control of economics, with private property and personal liberty protected, as Roosevelt proposes; a servile state controlled by a reactionary, bureaucratic government; such as they are trying in Germany and Italy; or a sharp swing to the left, and some form of communism as they are trying in Russia.

For one thing is certain—the United States couldn't go on as it was. There is no use people saying, if Roosevelt fails, that he should have left things alone, that he shouldn't have interfered with the natural course of busi-

SIDE GLANCES

By George Clark

"Except for that good looking fellow at the soda fountain this whole resort is a failure."

Twenty-five Years Ago To-day

THE VICTORIA DAILY TIMES
JULY 25, 1908
(From The Times Files)

With three wickets yet to fall at lunch time and a healthy looking score of 118 runs on the board and Mason and Percy Richardson well set and hitting the ball at a lively time, the Albions are beginning to see a win as the result of the game against Vancouver commenced this morning at Beacon Hill.

WHAT OF US?

BUT THE funny thing is Canada's attitude towards all this. So far as I can find out, Canada isn't doing anything about it at all—just sitting back and watching complacently. Every other country in the world at least is trying to do something worth while about the depression, recognizing that the system we have known has broken down and has got to be re-built. But here, right alongside the greatest and most hopeful experiment of all, we are just sitting down and watching. Our Parliament adjourns in a cheap row-over redistribution. Our government still yammers away about tariffs. Only the C.C.F. appears to realize what Roosevelt recognized from the first—that the old methods have gone forever, and the C.C.F. proposes an alternative much too drastic and communistic to suit most of us.

But this cannot go on. Sooner than most people expect the events across the line will work like a lever here, will well up into our politics whether the politicians want them to or not.

DULL, VERY

ALL VERY dull for an evening like this at our lake, when the dusk has come, and the black hills stand out against a scarlet sky in the west, and the first pale star is out, and the little girl from next door has just returned with Armand from a fishing expedition carrying three catfish by the tails. At the moment they are in the midst of the delicate operation of removing the catfish's vitals, which are exceedingly stubborn. Catfish are like that—seem to cling tenaciously to their innards and resist too much familiarity.

"Gosh," shrieks the little girl from next door, "but they're goosely and sloppy like, and cold. I don't think I'll eat many after all. I'd rather have porridge, I guess."

"That's just like a girl for you," says Armand scornfully, as he fairly wallows in gore.

And it is too dark now to write more. The loss to the public, I feel, is not irreparable.

Eczema on Baby Formed Water Blisters. Healed by Cuticura.

"When baby was thirteen months old eczema broke out on his cheeks, his legs from knees to ankles, and his arms from the elbows down. It itched and burned, causing him to scratch, and in a very short time large, sore eruptions formed. It also formed water blisters.

"I read an advertisement for Cuticura Soap and Ointment and sent for a free sample of each. Almost the first application eased the terrible itching. I purchased a box of Cuticura Ointment and a cake of Cuticura Soap and before I had finished them the baby was healed."

GRANT TO AID LIFE-SAVING

City Council Awards Sum to Anglers' Association at Clover Point

A grant of $250 to the newly-formed Clover Point Anglers' Association to aid in completion of the boathouse built by the organization at the point, was authorized by the City Council yesterday afternoon.

It was pointed out that life-saving facilities would be provided at the boathouse and experience in the past had been that this was necessary.

The association first approached the council for a loan of the sum, so the structure could be completed; but it was discovered the city had no power to do this. In view of the service to be rendered the public, however, a grant was in order, it was felt.

Alderman James Adam demurred and questioned if the city was in a position to give money to this life-saving institution when it had refused a grant to St. Joseph's Hospital, where hundreds of lives had been saved.

The mayor pointed out that such a grant would come under the Hospital's Aid Act and the city had no power to help St. Joseph's.

Complimented On Financial Brief

Mayor Leeming, Aldermen P. R. Brown and John Worthington, who presented the city's case to the provincial commission on municipal affairs, were complimented by members of the City Council yesterday afternoon on their excellent presentation. Copies of the city brief were presented to all the aldermen.

MAKES $9 DAILY FROM MOTORISTS

Associated Press.—Los Angeles, July 25.—One of the many young men in Los Angeles who dart out to automobiles halted by traffic signals and industriously wipe off windshields, headlights and what not in expectation of pay, was sentenced yesterday to twenty-five days in jail on a charge of obstructing traffic.

He boasted his "take" for the last few months had averaged $9 daily and more on Sundays.

It was once a common belief that the moon affected the minds of human beings.

A reunion for all students of Victoria College connected with the International Relations Society and all friends of the organization is being planned for this Saturday, July 29, at the Y.M.C.A. at 6:30 o'clock. The reunion will take the form of a dinner and speeches will be given by several of the charter members of the group.

Dr. Thomas Miller will be the guest speaker at the banquet and will take for his topic "The Value of an Ideal." Dr. Miller is well known for his views on international affairs and conditions and is in constant demand as a speaker for such gatherings.

All former members of the I.R.S. who intend to be present at the dinner are requested to get in touch with either Cyril Chave at Garden 3427 or William Finley at Empire 5555.

As limited accommodation is available, all those who will attend or wish further information are asked to get in touch with the above-mentioned persons before Friday, July 28.

TWO YEARS OLD
The International Relations Club was organized two years ago by a number of students then attending Victoria College. The aim of the society was to get students interested in international affairs and to cultivate a broader outlook and to partially destroy the strongly nationalistic feeling commonly prevailing. With a group of about fifteen students as a nucleus the club was formed and quickly grew into one of the largest organizations at the Craigdarroch Institution.

It is affiliated with clubs all across the continent and is associated with the Carnegie Foundation for the Promotion of Peace at Washington, D.C.

FUTURE AID UNCERTAIN

Whether Or Not Federal Government Will Continue Relief Assistance Unknown

Esquimalt Reeve Tells Council Unemployment Official Here Is Hopeful

Whether or not municipalities of British Columbia will receive further assistance from the federal government after the end of this month in providing unemployment relief is apparently not known to any officials of this province, according to a verbal statement made by H. T. Whitehead, secretary of the provincial executive committee on unemployment relief, to Reeve Albert Heald, of Esquimalt.

At a meeting yesterday evening, the reeve informed the Esquimalt Council that recently Mr. Whitehead had told him he had been unable to discover whether or not the Dominion authorities would continue their aid.

In a communication from Mr. Whitehead, it was stated that the federal government had agreed to maintain its contribution on the one-third basis until July 31, but no provision was made for relief given after that date.

Reeve Heald said that Mr. Whitehead had been somewhat hopeful for the future, despite the fact that nothing definite had been heard.

The reeve thought that the government's action in continuing its payments of $3-4 per cent might be assumed as an answer to the request to have Dominion officials undertake full control of relief. He also announced that he had received payment of single men's relief account for January and February from the Dominion, which had previously been withheld when the new agreement whereby the federal government took control of single men's relief, became effective.

JAPANESE ARE JOSEPH'S KIN

Prof. Odium Tells Audience That Japanese Are Descendants of Israelites

The Japanese in certain physiological respects resembled the ancient Egyptians, particularly the eye, and undoubtedly came from Joseph, contended Professor E. Odium, M.A., B.Sc., in an address before several hundred persons yesterday evening at the Chamber of Commerce auditorium on "Who Are the Japanese?"

Professor Odium stated his belief that the Japanese were descended from Joseph of the Bible and his dark-skinned wife, Asenath. He went on further to show why he thought the present day Japanese were descended from the Israelites. A trip to Japan eleven years ago when he inspected the temples and devoted considerable time to studying the people, their religion and their customs. Professor Odium claimed that in Japan he found certain agricultural instruments and musical instruments that he had seen depicted in an illustrated Bible he had when he was a boy. These instruments, he contended, were real Israelite implements and showed that the people were descended from Joseph and his wife.

Other arguments that the professor brought forth to support his theory was that the Japanese, who had no sheep in their country, represented a sheep, thus going back to the days when Joseph and his ilk were shepherds. He had also seen, Shinto priests in their annual observance of carrying down to the stream of running water a sacred ark, which was then returned to the temple, which he claimed was the age-old commemoration of the carrying down to the river Jordan of the sacred Ark of the Covenant.

The Samurais, the noblest class of Japan, received their name from the Samurians, the highest ruling people of the twelve tribes, he asserted. The figure twelve is significant both in Japan and England, he asserted. In one of Japan's very sacred temples there was a representation of twelve lions, twelve unicorns and twelve lions, twelve unicorns. This is traceable in England in the case of the jury of twelve.

Since the Japanese had no serpents, although there are some on the coast of China, the fiery flying serpent must have come from the tradition of the image held aloft by Moses.

WM. WOODIN JR. ILL IN ARIZONA

Associated Press
Tucson, Ariz., July 25.—William Woodin Jr., son of the Secretary of the United States Treasury, lay in a sanatorium suffering from a heart ailment to-day while his wife sped across country by airplane from Buffalo, N.Y., to be at his bedside.

Attending physicians said young Woodin's condition was satisfactory. The present heart attack was the second within several months, Woodin having been stricken as he alighted from an airplane at Winslow, where he had flown to meet Mrs. Woodin, who had been visiting friends at the Grand Canyon. He was placed under the care of a physician and later returned to his home here. He improved rapidly and soon was able to get about again.

PUMP POLICY NOT SETTLED

Public Works Executive to Consider Problem; Parking at Driveways Questioned

The executive of the city public works committee was appointed yesterday afternoon to deal with the question of curb pumps and parking limitations in front of private driveways.

Reports on the matter from the chief of police and city engineer were filed. The chief proposed that the council should either provide no-parking regulations in front of curb pumps or go away with them altogether. The city engineer agreed to this idea and suggested the council pass a by-law to prohibit parking in front of driveways.

Alderman James Adam said the council should go on record that when a curb pump garage became vacant the house for the pump should be automatically cancelled, but it was pointed out that the landlords usually owned the pumps and this would work hardship on them, affecting the value of the property.

Alderman Adam questioned the right of service stations to stop parking in their driveways when they took as much as eighty and one hundred feet of the curb.

In moving the item he referred to the public works executive, Alderman P. R. Brown said the council must be careful not to restrict trade in these times.

The Smoothest Piston Stroke

Ever Achieved with a Non-Premium Gasoline

WHEN you drive with 76, you zoom up the hills with the effortless smoothness of flight—because your motor has "a smoother piston stroke". You enjoy extra speed, power and acceleration—the satisfaction of more mileage—the knowledge that your motor is protected from all unnecessary wear.

There are specific reasons why Union 76 gives this extra performance. 76 has the highest anti-knock rating of any non-premium gasoline available in Western Canada. Pressure on the piston head is even and continuous. Power overlaps between the firing of every cylinder. Pounding and vibration is ended.

Three definite factors give 76 this higher anti-knock rating—scientific selection and blending of a wide variety of crude oils—manufacture under the direct supervision of skilled Union engineers—continual research to achieve improvement in 76 without adding to the cost.

Stop when you see the big orange 76 banners. Swing in to the orange and white Union pump. Ask for 76. Made in B.C. More value for your money—but no extra cost.

Mixed Marriage Problem Subject Of British Bill

Canadian Press
London, July 25.—The News-Chronicle says editorially: "There is evidence at strong feeling has been stirred by the bill, introduced into the House of Commons by Sir John Simon, giving a woman freedom to retain her British nationality when she marries a foreigner. The alternative bill, which gives effect to the Hague Convention of 1930, early does not satisfy the principle of equality between man and woman, since it leaves untouched the case in which the woman by reason of her marriage has acquired the nationality, but the logic of it is clear. Parliament will be on safe ground in granting women the simple option to retain their British nationality."

"Mixed marriages between different nationalities should be a useful and fitting thing, but those who enter into them must do so with their eyes open. Memories of war and its devastating consequences when husband and wife find themselves in opposite camps, and wives are liable to be interned or placed under police supervision in the country of their birth, are too recent to be lightly forgotten, and if we had to contemplate the state of war as chronic in the world, the advice to lovers of different nationalities could only be "beware." No change in the law could mitigate the suspicions, prejudices and animosities that are kindled against the "enemy alien" and those who bear his name in a country at war."

Marion Talley's Former Husband Marries Again

Berlin, July 24 (Associated Press).—The Berlin Zeitung am Mittag, in a dispatch from "Munich" to-day, said Michael Rauchhelsen, German concert pianist and former husband of Marion Talley of Kansas City, former Metropolitan Opera singer, had married Marie Trovgen, a noted singer, last Thursday in nearby Ammer See. The marriage of Marion Talley and Michael Rauchhelsen was annulled in January of this year at Long Beach, Calif., after the singer charged her husband had violated a pre-nuptial arrangement by refusing to allow her mother and sister to live with them.

GLORIFYING YOURSELF.

By Alicia Hart

Stand on both feet this summer! Don't shift your weight from one foot to the other because one or both of them hurt. Your feet need special attention when the days and the sidewalks are hot. If you would walk with a light, buoyant step and trip the light fantastic when the stars shine down on some al fresco dance place, then give your feet the attention they deserve. Tired, aching feet will be greatly revived by a soaking in salt and water. Use about a cupful of salt to two gallons of water and soak your feet for at least half an hour. Then rinse them. Vinegar baths are soothing to feet that are worn out and tired and hot. Use one-half cup of vinegar to a gallon of lukewarm water. Rinse your feet with clear water afterward. Drying your feet properly is half the battle. Be sure there is no dampness left on them when you have finished with the towel. Drying between each toe, separately, is important. If you have small callouses on your heels and bottoms of your feet, use a piece of pumice stone on them after each soaking. In time, the pumice treatment will tend to make the callouses disappear. Corns and bunions should be treated by a foot specialist. There are corn and bunion plasters which you can wear to keep them from hurting while you walk. Never cut corns yourself. Clean stockings each and every morning are most important to ideal foot comfort. It seems unbelievable that many girls wear their hose the second day without washing. That's a big mistake! Be sure that yours are clean every morning.

20,000 "Stars" Arrive Yearly In Hollywood

Only About 800 of Them Even Registered by Studios, Says Director; Story of Heartbreaks.

Canadian Press
New York, July 25.—Twenty thousand newcomers, a theoretical line eight miles in length, hopeful of breaking into motion pictures, arrive in Hollywood each year and, after a brief discouraging period, return home, according to a recent estimate based on years of survey by Fred Datis, casting director, says The New York Herald-Tribune. "The 20,000 interviewed each year are more or less 'courtesy' interviews," Datis explained. "In these we try to point out the slim returns to be gained by joining the 17,000 registered atmosphere players now in Hollywood, many competing for only a few hundred jobs a day. "We register a very small percentage, perhaps 800 a year, over all the studios. By the time we can give these persons a day's work we find that 200 of them have given up and left. The other 600 stay to join the extra players."

REVIVED AFTER HEART STOPPED

Baby Kept Alive Six Days After Apparently Dead

Associated Press
Pasadena, Cal., July 25.—The case of an eleven-month-old baby, revived five minutes after its heart had stopped beating and kept alive six days, was reported here to-day. The child, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. Maynard Dickinson of Pasadena, died beyond revival Sunday. Six days ago in the Pasadena Hospital attending physicians said the child's heart had ceased beating and no pulse or other sign of life was noted for five minutes. Dr. John S. Hibben obtained permission of the parents for an attempt to revive the infant, a victim of heat poisoning. Dr. Hibben then injected adrenalin into the heart, which thus was started again, and the child was placed in a respirator. In this life was maintained for six days, but the child's poison-deteriorated system would not allow it to recover, physicians said.

Your Baby and Mine

By MYRTLE MEYER ELDRIDGE

KEEPING BABY COOL IN MIDSUMMER
Hot weather is distressing enough to adults, but it can be devastating to children unless parents have wisdom and imagination. Those fortunate who can fly to the mountains or the seashore are blessed indeed; those who stay at home must learn how to bring vacation privileges to their own back yard. DRESS BABY IN CLOTHES, DAY AND NIGHT, except a diaper. This is perfectly safe so long as the temperature is in the 80's. And don't rush to stuff him into clothes the moment a cool breeze blows up. Use an electric fan if one is available. The breeze need not be thrown directly on the baby, but the air about him should be kept moving refreshingly. This may be done both day and night. Give baby a warm, soapy, cleansing bath in the morning. Frequently during the hot day treat him to a sponge bath. This prevents perspiration from drying on his skin and irritating it to the point of prickly heat. Use dusting powder or talcum generously in the moist folds of the skin. A powder containing starch or borax acid is soothing and healing. Give cool drinks of water by spoon or cup numerous times during the day. OLDER CHILDREN Let the older child scamper about in cotton undersweaters and overalls, or in sunsuits. Fill a tub in the back yard and let him dip in it at will. They would be in and out of water all day were they at the seashore, so why not in their own back yard? Fill the bathtub and give them the run of the bathroom for the afternoon hours. They'll play more happily, even though more damply, and will stay in out of the hot sun contentedly. Confine outdoor play to the morning hours. Designate the period after lunch for rest or pastime. Put a quilt or comfort on the floor downstairs if the upstairs rooms are unbearably hot and sunny. Keep the lower floor cool by closing windows and lowering blinds in the early morning. If the rule is made and kept that there shall be no play from one o'clock until four children will agree to it without fussing. Light meals, few clothes, lots of water to drink, and frequent baths are the gay roads to health and comfort in the torrid days of midsummer. To-morrow: "How Mother May Keep Cool in Summer."

HONEYMOON IS COMMENDED

Psychiatrist Says It Is Best Way to Start Married Life

Associated Press
Omaha, Neb., July 25.—All arguments to the contrary notwithstanding, Dr. George E. Neuhaus, Omaha psychiatrist, says he is a strong advocate of the time-honored honeymoon as the proper way to begin married life. "Suppose you decide," he supposes, "that after your marriage you'll go right to the apartment or house you're going to live in. Suppose you say to your friends, 'We aren't going to have a honeymoon.' "The result will be that you'll be besieged with invitations, phone calls and parties—worse than the most strenuous honeymoon. "Of course, for those who decide they can't afford a real honeymoon, the psychiatrist suggested stay-at-home programs with qualifications. "Disconnect your telephone, tell all your friends that you've gone to Europe or something," he recommends. "Duplicate the conditions of a real honeymoon, as best you can, at home."

TAKE IT EASIER IN THE KITCHEN BY MEAT LIFTING

By SISTER MARY
Meat loaves come into their own in summer-time. They can be prepared to do duty for two meals or more and are available in pleasing variety. Baked and jellied, such meat dishes are inviting and can be made very economically. Jellied veal and lamb loaves are particularly delicate and summery. They can be made quite attractive and festive looking by clever garnishing and are suitable for company as well as family fare. JELLIED VEAL LOAF One knuckle and shin of veal, 1 pound lean veal, 1 good sized onion, celery tops, 4 eggs, parsley, salt and pepper. Ask the butcher to saw through the veal bone in several places. Put bone, meat, peeled but not sliced onion, celery tops and boiling water to cover into a large kettle with a closely fitting cover. Simmer until meat is tender. Drain from stock and chop finely. Boil stock until reduced to 1 1/2 cups and strain. Simmer eggs in boiling water for twenty minutes. Garnish bottom of a mold with eggs cut in slices and rolled in minced parsley. Put in a layer of meat, season well with salt and pepper and cover with a layer of eggs cut in thin slices. Sprinkle with minced parsley and pour over stock. Put a plate over meat, weight lightly and let stand on ice until chilled and firm. Run a spatula around the mold to loosen it, turn out on a serving plate, garnish and cut in slices for serving. BAKED VEAL LOAF One and one-half pounds lean veal, 3 slices fat salt pork, 1 egg, 1 egg yolk, 1 cup cracker crumbs, 1/2 cup milk, 1 tablespoon minced parsley, 2 teaspoons powdered lemon rind, 1/2 teaspoon pepper, few drops onion juice, 1/4 teaspoon ground nutmeg. Remove skin and membrane from veal. Put meat with 2 slices of salt pork through food chopper. Beat egg and yolk until light. Add meat and mix thoroughly. Add beaten eggs and milk and pack into a small, brick-shaped bread pan. Brush with white of egg and put remaining slice of salt pork on top. Bake slowly two hours, prickling frequently while baking to permit the

Working Wives

By ANNE GARDNER

He was stretched out in the easy chair, Nan on his knee, her head pillowed on his shoulder. He stroked her hair as he talked.

"My first impulse," he told her, "was to try for a job that would pay me more than I can hope to get on the News for a long time. I imagine I could round up a publicity job, or get in with an advertising agency, or something of that sort. But I don't want to, except as a last resort. I've had this dream of building a publication of my own. I've planned things with that in view. I've got side tracked now in something that's merely a meal ticket. I'm afraid I'll never get back. What do you think?"

"I agree to that. But Jocko, dearest, why not let me?"

"No more of that, young lady." "But Jocko, I practically married you against your will. You didn't want to get married. You never would have for years, anyhow—if I hadn't virtually shanghaied you. It's changed your plans. It's made everything much harder for you. Now you've been thinking of letting it change your life. So—"

"Nan, this is once for all." He swung her about so that he could command her with his eyes. "The most marvelous thing I will bring me is you. Having you is so much better fortune than I ever dared dream of. Why—" he made a gesture to show the inadequacy of words. "If I never do anything more in the world than to be able to say, 'Nan loved me,' I'll still consider I was really successful and fortunate."

"But Jocko—" "That's all settled. Let's not talk about it any more."

"Oh, you are stubborn!" But Nan let the subject drop.

Jim and June returned from their brief honeymoon, and at last Nan had someone to whom she could tell the story of her abrupt marriage. June exclaimed, flattered, exclaimed again in a wholly satisfying way.

"And now you find you really loved Jocko after all. How perfectly romantic!"

"Perhaps I didn't love him all the time. But when he showed me how wonderful he could be, how unselfish in contrast to Harry's selfishness—there just could be no more of it."

"I'm so glad you're happy." Was there just a suggestion of wistfulness in June's tone? Nan looked at her quickly, but the eager little face revealed no sadness. She must have imagined it.

"You and Jim shall come to dinner to-night," Nan insisted.

She stopped at the grocery store alone, for Jocko was out on a story, and made her purchases. When she paid for them, the bill was over $4.00. She was startled. That was almost as much as she could spend for a week. For the first time Nan realized that she must be saving, even when it came to hospitality.

There was a frown on her face as she started her preparations for the meal.

CHAPTER XIX

Under the penny pinching that ensued in the following weeks, as Nan tried desperately to eke out household expenses from Jocko's slender salary, the glow began to fade from their romance.

It had been such fun to cook and fix up the house when she only had to think of what they wanted to have. Now Nan found that all the foods they liked to eat were too expensive. She was not yet housewife enough to contrive tasty dishes of cheaper materials. An amount which would have spelled luxury to a more experienced housewife meant pinching for her. There was problem number one.

Next she found that she had money only for strictest necessities, as she carried out Jocko's pronouncement that they must live on what he made. The flowers with which she had delighted to adorn the dinner table or have in vases about the living room must be discarded altogether. Nor was there a penny for adding to her little stock of china, silver and linen.

This last became a sore point—in fact the whole matter did. For as Nan began to experience little, culinary triumphs, she wanted to entertain. She wished to have company anyway, in her surge of domesticity, and she yearned to set a dainty table.

At the end of the first month that the new arrangement held, Nan found she had nothing left to pay the rent on the apartment. Then she tried very hard to keep the apartment going and make up the deficit at the same time. But her housekeeping ceased to be fun under the strain.

Inevitably the meals declined in quality as well as in price. There were experiences of stringy steaks and chops of unhappy flavor which Jocko ate manfully and praised highly, but that seriously hurt Nan's pride in doing things well.

Now that the original roseate radiance had passed Nan could not help comparing Jocko with other men. In the beginning this was all to his advantage. While the memory of her experience with Harry lingered strong, she gloried in Jocko's kindness and quiet strength.

When it came to certain innate qualities, other men were bores beside him. And in her exalted honeymoon mood she was the thing that mattered above all else.

But gradually her life slipped back onto its old level. Her work claimed her interest again, and her old hobbies began gradually to reassert themselves.

When she was working hard on a story, throwing her whole self into it, her whole being keyed to a high nervous pitch, Jocko's slowness would irritate her. For awhile she could remember that with the slowness went the proverbial sureness. But presently she got things so quickly herself.

Jocko sometimes told her that she sniffed news out of the air with that perfect nose of hers. When a problem presented with Harry's love for him, she kept her from pouring out on him the reactions of her strained nerves.

At first they loved to work together on stories. But as Nan found herself growing more and more impatient with him, Jocko quietly contrived so that he need bother her as little as possible.

Jocko was having his problems, too. Nan had seemed so impossibly far away from him that he had never given any thought to the practical side of being married to a brilliant woman with a career.

In insisting that their living come from his salary, he had followed a deep instinct, rather than any line of reasoning. A man must care for his wife, else he was a bum, a parasite. Jocko could not live that way and retain his self-respect.

But he began seeing that this dictum, so necessary to him, laid a heavy burden on Nan. He saw that she was losing her pleasure in running the house, that the meals had become a worry to her rather than a pleasure.

He cleaned the apartment, wiped the dishes as they could not afford a maid. He did what he could by lauding her efforts, by eating more than usual when the meals were poor in quality. But all that he could do was not enough. Was he being fair to Nan? He began to feel that he was not.

Yet, in fairness to her, could he follow the other course and let her pay the bills for their joint living? Occasionally he thought tempted him—let her pay for a few things. But this he put from him resolutely. Once started on that course, no telling where it would end, especially as she made more than he. No, Goodness knew, he did little enough for her. Her weekly clothes cost as much as his, his weekly contribution to the exchequer.

Uncle Wiggily's Straw Hat

(By HOWARD R. GARIS)

Uncle Wiggily took his new straw hat down off the rack in the hall of his hollow stump bungalow and put it on his head, not the bungalow, of course. He couldn't do that.

"My, you're all dressed up to-day," said his wife.

"Oh, yes," said Mrs. Longears. "You look very stylish with your new straw hat. It has a red ribbon it."

"Yes, it's a nice hat all right," said the bunny gentleman, "but I'm not exactly dressed up."

"You must be going some place special," said Nurse Jane with a laugh as she came into the hall to see if the front door needed dusting.

"Oh, I'm only going to call on Mr. Twistytail, the pig gentleman," answered Uncle Wiggily.

"This is the first time I ever knew you to put on your new hat to go calling on a fat pig," said Mrs. Longears. "Tell the truth now, Wiggily! You can't fool me!" and she laughed.

"Well, Mrs. Twistytail isn't feeling so well," said Mr. Longears. "I told Twisty I'd drop over and see how she was. And I thought it would be nice if I wore my new hat. I thought it would make Mrs. Twistytail feel a little better, perhaps. Give her something to talk about you know."

"Yes, I think that would be nice," said Mrs. Longears. "I would go see Mrs. Twistytail myself, but I am so busy. But give her my love and say I'll come as soon as I can."

"I think I'll send her a little piece of strawberry short cake that I made just now," said Miss Pussycat Wuzzy. "I think she'd like it."

"I'm sure she will," said Uncle Wiggily, twinkling his pink nose. "But send her a large piece, not a small one. Mrs. Twistytail is a lady. I don't like to see her eat a little bit of something."

Uncle Wiggily looked in the glass to make sure his new straw hat was straight on his head, he brushed a speck of dust off the red band and by that time Nurse Jane had returned from the kitchen with a piece of cake in a little basket.

Away hopped the rabbit gentleman to call on the sick pig lady and as he hopped he whistled a little tune, for he was very happy. It was a hot day, as many days are in July and after a while, when he reached a shady place under the tree, the rabbit gentleman took off his straw hat, put it on the grass near him beside the piece of strawberry shortcake in the basket and came to sleep.

Now when Uncle Wiggily awoke along came wandering three little ducks. They were the small brothers of Lulu, Alice and Jimmie. Wiggilywobble and this was the first time they had seen Uncle Wiggily, being newly hatched from their shells.

"Oh, look!" said one little duck, whose name was Quackie. "What's that funny thing?" and he flipped one wing at Uncle Wiggily's hat.

"It looks like a bird bath to me," said Quackie, another little duck. "But it isn't a bird bath. It's a hat. The third little duck."

"We can easily put some water in that bath and have a lot of fun paddling around in it," spoke Quackie.

"Hurry!" said Quackie. "Let's roll this empty bird bath down close to the edge of the Duck Pond. Then it will be easy to fill with water so we can paddle in it."

"Yes," said Quackie. "We are too little, yet, to swim in the big pond, but we can make a nice little pond of our own out of this empty bird bath. Come on, we'll roll it down to the edge of the pond."

So the three little ducks, waddling and quacking and fluttering their tiny wings, pushed, rolled and slid Uncle Wiggily's new straw hat over the grass, over the dirt and gravel and through the mud to the shore of the big Duck Pond. It was hard work for them and it didn't do the new hat any good. First it was stained green with grass color, then a lot of sand and gravel got in the straw and lastly a lot of soft mud stuck to the new straw hat.

But the little ducks didn't care. Standing on the edge of the pond they splashed water with their wings until Uncle Wiggily's hat was filled, just like a bird bath.

"Now we can paddle!" said Quackie and up over the edge of the hat the three little ducks fluttered and they began to swim around and around and around in the bunny's new hat. And just then Mr. Longears opened his eyes and sat up. And what happened next I'll tell you in the story to-morrow night. It will be called Uncle Wiggily and Mrs. Twistytail. And I hope the baker's home wife and the elephant a peanut cake to pack in his trunk to take to the seashore with him.

Uncle Ray's Corner

Adventure of the Northland

FIRE AND FOOD

After their vain efforts to make a fire burn by rubbing wood on wood, Uncle Tim and his young friends did not feel the need of a blaze so much as before. In the excitement they had almost forgotten their troubles, and the bright sunlight had done some thing toward drying their clothes. However, they still wanted a fire, and as Uncle Tim held the flashlight lens over some dry moss, they watched with excited eyes.

The idea worked! The lens concentrated the sun's rays and the moss caught fire. Little bits from the dry driftwood were placed over the burning moss, then larger pieces, until at length there was a roaring bonfire.

"This is something like it!" said Allen.

"Yes," rejoined Roberta. "The fire's fine, but I'm getting hungry."

"So am I," chimed in Uncle Tim. "And not a little bit thirsty!"

"Oh, if we only had some lemonade!" moaned Allen.

As the boy mentioned the lemonade, all turned their eyes toward the sea. "Look!" shouted Uncle Tim. "Our boat, or what's left of it, has drifted almost to shore!"

As he spoke, he ran to the water's edge, and in a moment he was stretching out his hand in an effort to grasp the rim of the almost-sunken boat. It proved to be just beyond his reach, but Allen handed him a piece of driftwood and with its help he managed to pull the boat ashore. Allen helped him haul it clear up on the beach. There was such a great hole in the bottom that most of the water ran out in a short while.

"Both of our oars are gone," said Uncle Tim, "but look at all the things which are still inside! Take, for example, this bundle of sandwiches that we didn't eat on our picnic—wrapped in waxed paper and held down by this can when the boat filled with water."

"What kind of sandwiches are they?" asked Roberta.

"Let's see," he replied, taking off the paper. "Oh, they're all wet! They used to be jelly sandwiches!"

"What a world!" said Allen.

"But look!" cried Roberta. "There's the jug of lemonade at the end of the boat, and it's got a cork in it, too!"

There were a few other things in the rescued boat, including Uncle Tim's fire glasses; but the three lost little time in opening the lemonade and drinking part of its refreshing contents.

STATE COMBED FOR DESPERADO

Texas Outlaw Being Pursued on Land and From Air After Gun Battle

Associated Press

Dexter, Iowa, July 25.—Clyde Barrow, notorious Texas outlaw, yesterday fought a machine-gun battle with police in a wooded hide-away and in the evening dodged over western Iowa with a network of men in planes, armored cars, motorcycles and automobiles—all connected by wireless—not in pursuit.

Fleeing with him in a stolen automobile was a man identified as Jack Sherman and a woman, both of them believed badly wounded. They had hidden out near here for a week with an arsenal of two machine guns, thirty-four automatic pistols and five revolvers.

The machine-gun battle brought about the capture of Marvin Barrow, brother of Clyde and Marvin's wife, the Barrow brothers are wanted for four murders and wounding of three policemen.

Park A. Findley, chief of the state bureau of investigation, and Assistant General Charles Grahl of the Iowa national guard, led the hunt from a plane yesterday, and started again this morning.

Thoughts on Christianity

precede a faith. An individual may boast of his faith minus the Christian ethic which should lead to it. Here they err for while we may not condemn, we cannot condone, for condemnation would eliminate the personal figure of Christ, or rather the warmth of His teachings. Reason may doubt this, then let reason make the search. She will be rewarded with a knowledge of God—but faith, love, discipline are necessary to "know" Him.

Then, too, the good derives from religion is not to be approved of the individual, for power is not a fit mate for humility; nor superiority, for that would limit the infinite spirit; nor even to walk in peaceful ways, which is not the way of the Cross. The good of religion is to be religious. Should the true Christian desire to take his bearings in his relation to Jesus Christ, no doubt he would find within himself the character of a man, for he is the summary of it: so much so, that if, by a decree of God humanity should find itself suddenly reduced to two individuals, one whose soul was "divine good," and the other to the world, nothing would be changed but number. Still tolerance and love would be necessary on behalf of that choice spirit united to God, otherwise union would cease to exist. Which reminds me, when it comes to a question of faith—I like to think—that if Lot's faith had been stronger, and that he had not stopped his questioning at "divine good," Sodom and Gomorrah would not have been destroyed. WOMEN'S MOVEMENT

To the Editor:—In to-night's Times Dennis Hoare accuses the Women's Movement of "having as its foundation misleading propaganda."

At the first meeting I told my audience the exact nature of the movement, and that it was a movement for the benefit of women and children. It is as follows: Six days' work each month at $2.79 a day; two days a week, and one day a week, and so on, until the women are paid for their work. This amounts to $16.74 each month. When you think of people trying to buy clothes and food and pay for light and insurance, and in some cases, rent, out of this sum, you will see that it is impossible for them to save anything from the wages when they get only $2.79. It is just a hand-to-mouth existence. But I am sorry if I gave anyone a false impression.

In regard to the other contention made by the writer, that I said in my letter, a few days ago, that the teaching of Christ embodied in the principles of the Oxford group are "quite incapable of achieving what the Women's Movement intends to accomplish," I said that I had been hoping that the church and the Oxford group movement would take a definite lead in condemning capitalism, and I am still hoping that they will. When the

THE MEDICAL REVOLUTION

To the Editor: Your British papers, of course, have told you of the revolution now in progress in England against medical autocracy. For the benefit of those who do not see those papers, I will summarize the news. The campaign will not be deterred by the tradition, etiquette or stringent regulations of the British Medical Association. For ten years the National Health League has been quietly working out its programme of reform. The president is Sir Augustus Pitt-Rivers, K.C.V.O., a son of the late Duke of Cambridge. Associated with him are many eminent men and over 2,000 doctors.

The revolt of the League is directed against the British Medical Association, the strongest trade union in the world, the basis of attack being that for the past generation medicine has been sidetracked by the theory that germs are the cause of disease.

Parliament will be asked to take action on the whole operation of medical service in Great Britain and when the time comes, the 2,000 doctors will disclose themselves.

Efforts will be made to secure the teaching of simple medicine in schools, even at the cost of displacing currently taught subjects. Onslaughts will be made against over-crowding and the advance of the sanitary engineer will be promoted.

The germ theory which English medicine adopted from the Continent, postulates that every disease is caused by a definite micro-organism which is specific for that disease and introduced into the body from outside sources. "I maintain," says Professor O. A. Newell, head of the new research department, "that in no single instance has it been conclusively proved that any micro-organism is the specific cause of a disease. . . . The alternative theory is the bio-chemical theory. . . . based upon the theory that faulty living, unhygienic surroundings, mental and emotional states, impair the vital functions of the body. . . ."

The doctors of England, free from the archaic rules of the B. M. A., the veterinary surgeons and the farmers, can build the healthiest race this country has ever known. On the other side of the battle, the people are being misled by the propaganda of the medical profession.

"I do not believe that good results can be obtained from experiments on animals, because their mental reactions are so utterly different."

"My health has been badly undermined," says Professor Newell, "by operations and inoculations conducted for experimental purposes."

"It is a strict rule of the League that nobody connected with it shall profit financially. It is a sad thing to say, but medicine is run for profit; it ought not to be."

This medical revolution marks a forward step in the progress of a nation. Personally, I have long opposed the germ theory of disease and its attendant emphasis on the use of experimental torture of animals. What has been morally wrong cannot be scientifically right. Many thousands have long held the vision glorious of a forward movement which is ethical and spiritual. Materialism, selfishness, cruelty have been a definite barrier to progress, but it seems that at long last a new era is beginning. None of us who have been associated with the fight against vivisection need have any shame for our decision.

Boys to Travel

Interior on Cycles

Young Victorians Will Mix Work and Pleasure and See British Columbia.

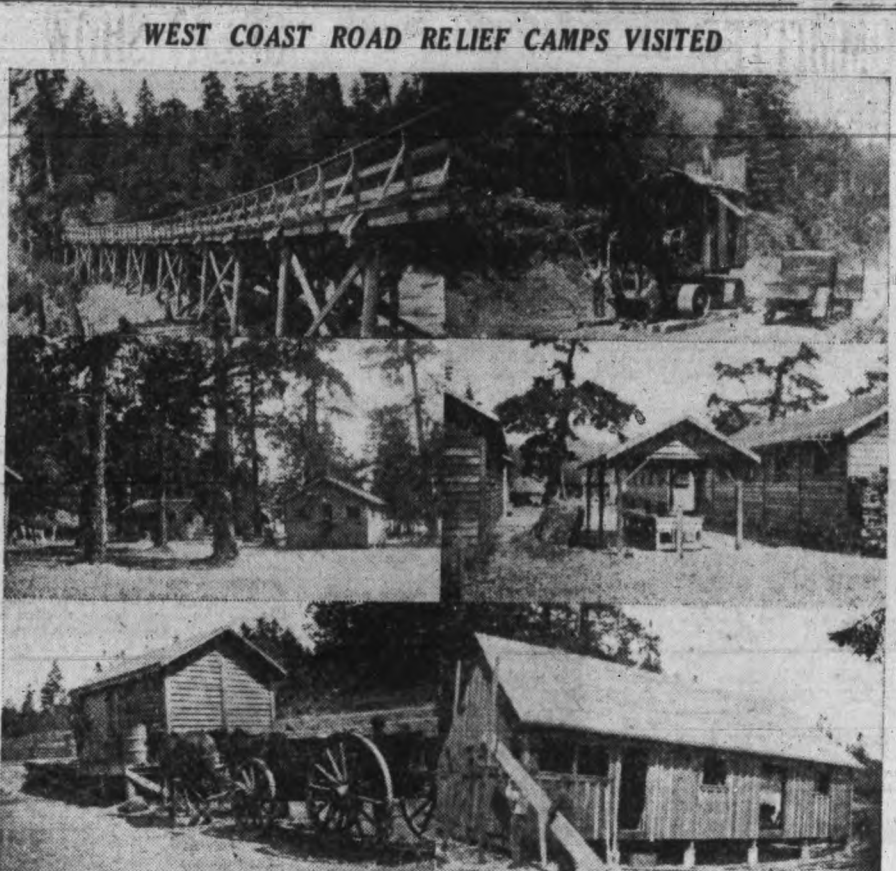

Summer and the wanderlust have gripped Claude Peden, the youngest member of the Peden bicycle racing family of Victoria, and Alan Bentley.

The two lads plan to mix business and pleasure by touring British Columbia on bicycles and working where there are jobs to be had. They will leave Victoria August 10 and travel to Vancouver by way of Sidney and St. John's. From the terminal city they will proceed to Chilliwack, where they anticipate they will work for two weeks picking hops. Then they will ride through the Okanagan.

Claude is well known as a coming bike rider and no doubt his trip will put him in good condition for future racing. He contemplated continuing on across the continent to the World's Fair, but paternal interests interrupted this plan. Alan Bentley has also done a little racing around Victoria, although he has not taken it as seriously as the Peden boys. Both boys are just out of high school and anxious to discover what else there is in the world besides Vancouver Island.

 Hinchliffe Plans to Raise Standards of B.C. Teachers and Their Teaching Training for British Columbia school teachers is to be standardized, according to an announcement from the Hon. Joshua Hinchliffe, Minister of Education.

 To bring up the quality of teaching in B.C. and obtain a better average of teachers, it is planned to make the entrance requirements to Normal schools more difficult, to lengthen the term and possibly introduce a compulsory post-graduate course, Mr. Hinchliffe explained. He said elimination of those who do not intend to teach in the teaching profession for the long term.
 The British Columbia Teachers' Association Board, under Mr. Hinchliffe, has today completed the hearings on the new standards. The standards are from those who object to being dismissed, reduced, and from school boards who are seeking to enforce dismissals. The judgments so far have been about equally in favor of teachers and the school boards.
 The board, which commenced its sittings early in July, is composed of H. MacDonald of Victoria, chairman; A. Perry, North Vancouver, representing the B.C. School Trustees' Association; and G. W. Clark of Vancouver, representing the B.C. Teachers' Federation.

NATIONAL LEADER
COMMITTEE TO HEAR OF HOME

Witnesses Will Be Called Thursday About Conditions at Maple Rest

Complaints about the conditions at the Maple Rest Nursing Home will have an opportunity to voice their opinions to the health committee of the City Council next Thursday afternoon. It was decided this morning when the committee met to start the investigation of the home instituted by the City Council.

Alderman Andrew McGavin and W. D. Todd, who raised the issue in council, sat with the committee this morning and the subject was discussed generally. Mayor Leeming gave the aldermen a resume of a previous inquiry made into the home more than a year ago.

Alderman McGavin said there would be at least two or three to appear before the committee Thursday. Both he and Alderman Todd have heard complaints about the place and wish to have them cleared up one way or another.

At the meeting of the City Council yesterday afternoon the Maple Rest Home was subject of heated comment by some members of the council. Alderman J. D. Hunter, who said he had visited the home since Alderman Andrew McGavin and W. D. Todd pressed for an investigation, declared he could see no reason why there should be so much talk about the place.

"I spent the whole morning there, and after what I saw I think it is a shame to cast such aspersions on the place," he declared.

His detailed the menu for various meals, the care given the patients and other conditions at the home.

"If I were old and poor and broke, and when I saw the place I would like to go to the Maple Rest Home," he said.

Alderman McGavin declared every member of the council had a right to express an opinion.

By ARTHUR STOTT
 Special Representative of The Victoria Times

London, July 15, (by mail).—As the long London twilight deepens into the night the Welsh boys gather in Hyde Park to sing in their native tongue. Crowds thronging in the coolness of the evening, hear the melodies sung with resonant voices and stop to marvel at the purity of tone shown by the lads and young men. Grouped in circles of ten or a dozen, the singers run through their folk songs and national favorites, in part singing. Deep voices of baritone blend with the voices of tenors, while boy sopranos add to the beauty of the selections. Ordinary men and boys they are, in their hearts the servant classes in Kensington, with a fair sprinkling of miners among them.

Not for money do they sing, but for the pure joy of singing. It is the music in their hearts that pours forth from their lips in the late evening. There is no formality in the event. Men drift into the group to join in a song and then saunter off, while the fellows keep up refrain after refrain. Nor are they coarse songs, but sweetly plaintive melodies fairly breathing a spirit of brotherhood and the hills of home and the beauty of Wales.

How different they sound to the squeaky, snarl of the brass band, the blarney of the street organ, the blarney of the street organ, the blarney of the street organ.

There seems to be a little appeal, too, in the selections of gramophone beggars play on the streets. The men, dressed in their best, and carrying a clean, push handcart carrying small photographs which grind out the notes of half forgotten popular songs, their faces lit up with the glow of their stretched caps. More gruesome are the blind who wander, led by an able bodied guide, through the crowds of their dolorous cries of "Blind people."

Of a somewhat higher calibre are the pavement artists and modelers at sea-side resorts. The former offer passers-by attractive chalk pictures, drawn by them on the sidewalks, while the latter usually trace and build their "works of art" in the sand. At Clacton-on-Sea, where the sea is kept as busy as a Mexican jumping bean, hopping about to pick up the pennies holiday-makers toss him.

I wandered among the shades of the other day, gazing at the memorials to Britain's great in Westminster Abbey. The names, that brought to mind deeds of courage on the battle-field, feats of sheer daring on the sea, actions for the public weal in parliament and triumphs in the fields of finer arts, looked down on me from their splendid sculptures. Simplest and most impressive to me was the gold-lettered black slab on the floor near the main entrance, the last resting place of the remains of "The Unknown Soldier." "Greater love hath no man" read the lettering.

Before the figure of Shakespeare I paused to reconstruct the history of the immortal playwright of Stratford-Avon.

If you go down to the East India docks, you will come across a race apart from the rest of the world—Lascars from the world girding ships, which bring cargoes from distant ports to the centre of the empire. Small, swarthy, wiry, they have a foreign look one does not usually associate with alien visitors. A knife-handle bulged under one of their tight blue jerseys and I thought of Sax Rohmer and Bedford-Jones stories.

The weather here is hard to fathom. One day I sweated under a blazing sun that sent heat waves shimmering along the streets and brought forth newspaper stories headed: "A Month of Sun Days Coming." The next day, under a grey sky, a stiff, chilly breeze was blowing the petals from garden roses.

No wonder the English drink beer. Wisely-wash soft drinks sell for sixpence a glass and good, cool lager costs from fourpence up.

The Oak Bay Rose Society has undertaken to provide an exhibition of roses at the Victoria Horticultural Society's annual show to be held on Friday and Saturday at the Willows and is making an effort to have all rose growers, whether members of the society or not, send in blooms for the display. Any having flowers to give for the exhibition are requested to get in touch with Mrs. M. R. Jamieson at Garden 3588.

Promoter Jimmy Johnston Reported All Through With Garden

Poor Gate in Recent Sharkey-Carnera Bout Breaking Point

Equipose More Than Evens Count With Rival Plucky Play

FOR SOME time there has been talk to the effect that Jimmy Johnston would be all through as matchmaker of Madison Square Garden when his contract expires in October.

Speculation reached almost the status of a cliché when the recent Carnera-Sharkey heavyweight championship fight failed to reach $100,000. The Garden directors still have a headache over the Mara-Dempsey promotion of the Schmeling-Baer fight right in Madison Square Garden's own back yard.

But over the whole period of Johnston's matchmaking, a time of depression, especially during the last two years, the Garden has managed to show a net profit, and in one of those years a dividend. Of course there have been hockey, bicycle racing, horse shows, wrestling and other exhibitions than fighting—but until the Carnera-Sharkey thing, hampered by being staged just after the Baer-Schmeling bout, Johnston had not done badly at all.

The Garden's total income during the year ending May 31, 1933, was $2,557,202, according to a financial report just made available. Expenses during this period were $2,289,199. That meant a net profit of $128,373 and no dividends. Against this, the year ending May 31, 1932, showed an income of $3,092,492, against expenses of $2,597,564. The net profit was $1,500,000. There was a dividend of $150,000 and the dividend amounted to $33,721.

The decrease in profit between 1932 and 1933 thus was $112,353. Johnston probably is ready to tell you that a few thousands of dollars can make a awful amount of difference in a man's popularity with his employers.

This report is for New York's Madison Square Garden alone, and does not include the Boston Garden, a partly-owned subsidiary.

How much is the New York Garden worth? Assets, including land, buildings, etc., were listed in the report at $4,622,142. Under liabilities, capital stock was listed at $3,175,517 and mortgages $1,200,000.

Equipose, quite possibly the best horse in training on the North American continent, evened an old score with Plucky Play at Arlington Park on Saturday by winning the $10,000 added handicap at a mile and quarter. Last year Plucky Play, which finished out of the money Saturday, being fourth, was given 11 pounds and Equipose 134 pounds in the Arlington feature.

The result was that Equipose was forced to take second, beaten by a neck. Saturday Equipose again carried the top impost, but he did not have to concede nearly as much as he did last year. When Equipose was sent to the post it was clear proof that he has recovered from an attack of weak underpinning.

DID YOU KNOW THAT—

Eddie Gharney, who used to catch that fast ball of Walter Johnson's when Walter was throwing it up there so it looked like a BB shot, has returned to major league baseball along with his old chief, at Cleveland. . . Eddie still tells that story about his home run that went for Sweeney. . . two were out, Frank Egan was on first and Gharney was at the plate. . . Eddie caught one on the nose and it sailed far up into the left field bleachers. . . Ellerbe somehow got the notion the ball had been caught. . . Reaching third he turned and jogged to his position in the infield. . . Gharney steamed right on around, passing Ellerbe. . . there was nothing to do but rail Eddie out.

MACDONALDS TAKE LEAD

Score 4 to 3 Victory in Third of Senior Softball Play-offs; Jokers Protest

In the third game of the finals for the championship of the senior division of the City Softball League, Macdonalds yesterday evening defeated Jokers 4 to 3 in an eighth inning rally when they scored two runs to come from behind a 3 to 2 count. The game, however, will be protested by the Jokers who claim that Chuck Chapman batted out of turn in the eighth to drive in the two winning runs.

Both pitchers turned in brilliant performances for their respective teams. Chuck Turner doing the mound work for the winners and Lloyd Jones pitching for the Jokers.

The first game came in the second inning of the game when Macdonalds drove across two runs. The Jokers' first count came in the fourth, when they scored a single run, and they took a one run lead in the sixth with two more runs, both scored on errors.

In the eighth, with two men on, Chapman, it is alleged, batted in place of Monaghan and scored the two men with a double, to give Macdonalds victory.

A crowd of between 1,000 and 1,200 persons witnessed the game which provided a first class exhibition of softball.

The fourth game of the series will be played on Wednesday night at Central Park. The umpires will be Ernie Stocks and Bob Whyte. Following the game there will be a meeting of the full board of the Lower League Association at the Y. M. C. A. at 8:30 o'clock.

Prince Albert Reds Eliminate Winnipeg Irish in Western Play-downs

Toronto, July 25.—Crippled and leg weary, Toronto Scottish, North American and Dominion soccer champions, crashed into the eastern Canada finals here yesterday evening with a brilliant 5 to 2 victory over McIntyre Mines, Northern Ontario champions.

The game, third of the Ontario series in the Dominion Football Association eliminations was fought at a gruelling pace throughout the ninety minutes with the northern miners fighting desperately to overcome the three-goal lead piled up in the first half by the Scots.

Prior to yesterday evening the teams had collided twice, each game resulting in a draw. The first match was scoreless last Wednesday and on Saturday the score was 3 to 3.

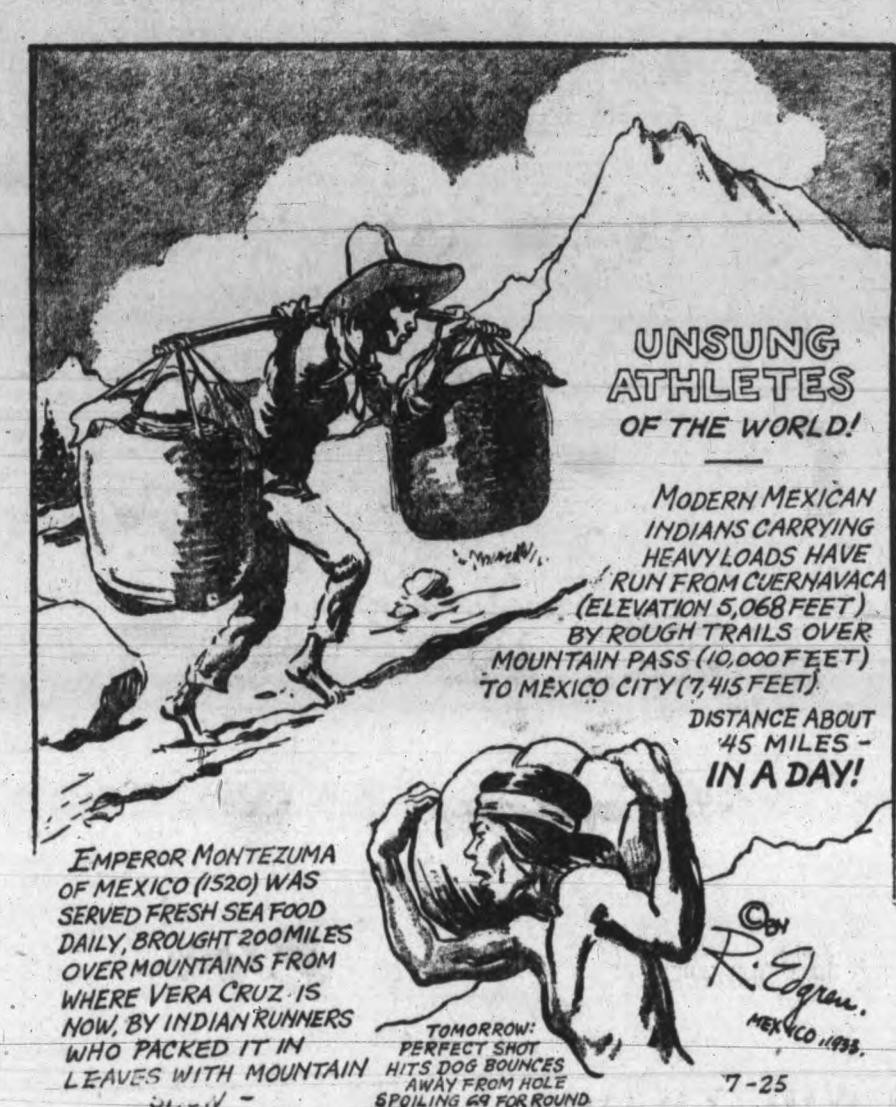

The Scottish and Montreal Canadian Nationals will play Thursday and Saturday in the first two games of the eastern final series. Venue for the games was not named. If a third game is necessary it will be played Monday.

Winnipeg, July 25.—Manitoba passed out of the Dominion soccer championship picture here yesterday evening when the Winnipeg Irish fell before Prince Albert Reds, 4 to 1.

The victory gave the Saskatchewan eleven triumph by two games to one. They lost the opening tussle, 2 to 1, and captured the second 1 to 0. They now await the arrival of Calgary C.F.R., winners over British Columbia, yesterday evening, with whom a series of best of three games will be played for the western Canada title and the right to meet the eastern champions for the coveted trophy.

Tillicums Battle Slingers To Draw In Baseball Clash

Senior Amateur League Clubs Deadlock 5 to 5 in Eighth-inning Struggle

CLUBMEN RALLY TO EVEN COUNT

Slingers Fail to Hit in the Pinches; Noble and Proudlove Opposing Pitchers

With the Tillicums coming from behind twice to tie the score yesterday evening's Senior Amateur Baseball League game at the Athletic Park between the clubmen and Slingers ended in a 5 to 5 deadlock. Play was halted at the end of the eighth inning on account of darkness. As a result of the no-decision affair the position of the teams remains unaltered, the Tillicums being second and Slingers in the cellar.

Tillicums had one of their off nights and no less than eight errors were chalked up against them. Jimmy Proudlove worked on the mound for them and held Slingers to five hits. He struck out nine but had a little trouble with his control, walking eight. Jack Noble returned to the mound after an absence of several weeks. He pitched good ball but his teammates let him down at crucial periods. He was nicked for five hits, struck out nine and walked six.

Inability to hit in the pinches cost Slingers the game, they having eleven men left stranded on the bases. Slingers grabbed a two-run margin in the first inning. Bannison showed a good turn of speed to beat out a hit to Fleming at third. He went to second on a wild pitch by Proudlove and to third on Constable's fly out to L. Patrick. Restall got a life on an error by Fleming. Bannison scoring. Purnall was safe on Stipe's error. Restall halting at third. Purnall stole second. Cummins hit to Fleming, who made no play with ball, filling the bases. Mowat bunted but Restall was nipped at the plate. Proudlove to Hill. However, the latter made a low throw to first in attempting to complete the double play and Purnall reached home. Williams walked, leading the Slingers to the second time. Worthington retired the side by grounding to Fleming, who touched third.

The Tillicums got one run back in the fourth. Gibbons beat out a hit to Williams. Lynn Patrick whiffed. Chapman hit to Williams who, in attempting to cut off Gibbons, threw wide to second and the runner scored before the ball was returned from the outfield.

Slingers got the run back in the fifth. Purnall walked and was safe at second when Gibbons's throw to the keystone sack from Cummins's grounder was dropped by Taylor. Marley was safe on an error by Gibbons, leaving every base occupied. Williams struck out on a third called strike. Worthington lined to Stipe. Purnall scoring after the catch. Noble struck out.

DEADLOCK SCORE

Two runs in the last of the sixth put the Tillicums on even terms. After Gibbons had struck out, L. Patrick and Chapman came through with successive singles. Patrick reaching third on Gibbons's fumble of Williams's grounder. Worthington singled over second, scoring Cummins. Noble was safe on an error by Fleming. Williams crossing the bases, Bannison walked, filling the bases, but Constable grounded to Gibbons.

A passed ball by Worthington and an error by Gibbons's grounder gave the Tillicums their two runs in the last of the seventh and tied the score for the second time. The Tillicums got two runners on in the last of the eighth, but were unable to push home the winning run.

Yoxall's Three Splendid Goals Win For Calgary

Performs Hat-trick as Albertans Eliminate Cowan-Dodson From Dominion Soccer

Capture Deciding Match By 3 to 1

Coast Champs Beaten After Winning First Game; Calgary Plays Prince Albert

Calgary, July 25.—Pacific Coast champions, Cowan-Dodson, yesterday evening fell before Calgary C. P. R., Alberta's soccer kings, 3 to 1, in the deciding struggle of a best-two-out-of-three series of the British Columbia - Alberta Dominion football playdowns. Calgary's victory carried them to Winnipeg to face Prince Albert, winners of the Saskatchewan - Manitoba series with Winnipeg Irish, for the western crown and the right to enter the Dominion final.

Led by the hat-trick performance of local, rangy C.P.R. centre forward, the Albertans made all the breakthroughs to record two goals in the first half and mark up the third in the final session, despite the rugged checking of the Chinese star, Jack Soon, left-half of Vancouver, and Dawson, brilliant centre-forward, Yoxall pressed to the goal net to tally his three pretty goals and to threaten to score several others.

Last Thursday night Vancouver started out with a rush to capture the first game 2 to 0, but Calgary replied with Saturday's 4-to-1 win and left no doubt in yesterday evening's battle.

Soon and Dawson were Cowan-Dodson leaders, the latter collecting the one coast tally on a pass from Hunter. HITS CROSSBAR

Vancouver kicked off with Dawson dribbling for Calgary's net, but the outthrust defence drove the attack back and in a pretty passing play Yoxall kicked into the crossbar. Gregson cleared for Vancouver only to have Yoxall return with another threat, missing the goal by inches.

McConachy's defensive display blocked another Calgary charge, until Blair slipped the ball neatly to Yoxall, who picked the corner for the first Alberta goal fifteen minutes from the start. Two stalwart Cowan-Dodson defenders, however, were unable to prevent Yoxall from scoring his second goal in the twenty-fifth minute. A third goal came in the thirty-fifth minute when Yoxall, after a brilliant run, slipped the ball into the net.

With only about five minutes left, Yoxall accepted Smith's pass for the third C.P.R. marker. Vancouver's forwards threw everything into the game, with Soon on top of all plays, but McKenzie held Calgary's fort until the final whistle.

YOXALL SCORES AGAIN

At the twenty-five-minute mark, Yoxall bounced the ball on his skull and tossed it behind Watson for Calgary's second goal. Desperately the British Columbians swarmed down the pitch to pelt shot after shot at McKenzie, who saved one by his finger tip, knocking the ball over the bar.

The home team forced the play into Vancouver area when the second half opened, bent on adding to their lead, but Soon relieved the pressure with a long drive. Soon again disrupted a C.P.R. onslaught when he took the ball from Yoxall neatly, passing to Cowan. Cowan tried some headwork, but found McKenzie in his road. Vancouver first baseman, who was charged to worry McKenzie with a barrage that nearly failed. Soon continued feeding his mates until they broke away once more, swarmed around Calgary's citizens' stand, found Hunter, who accepted prettily and recorded the coast's lone goal. It was the prettiest combination play of the evening.

forwards, Hyslop and Smith, displayed some pretty combination, but their play broke up near their opponents' goal.

Watson's smart goalkeeping prevented additional markers for Calgary. Remarkable heading by Smith, Dawson and Hyslop failed to carry the coasters to a goal, although Dawson's header forced McKenzie, Calgary goalie, to move fast. Smith drove a swift one for the corner, but McKenzie again was in the way.

Twin Victory Over Philadelphia Puts Washington On Top

Senators Beat Grove and Earnshaw to Regain American League Leadership

Defeat Halts Grove's Winning Streak at Six; Other Teams Are Idle

Through the once impregnable pitching armor of Philadelphia Athletics' twin mound aces, Bob Grove and George Earnshaw, Washington Senators have blasted their way once more to the top of the American League standing.

Taking advantage of New York Yankees' idleness, the Senators battered the A's into defeat yesterday, 5 to 2 and 10 to 6, and moved into first place by a half-game margin. The third-place Athletics are now eleven games behind the Yankees.

Grove was the victim of bunched hits in the second and fourth innings, which netted the Senators their five runs.

The Senators drubbed Earnshaw for eleven hits and eight runs, in seven innings in the second game, which wouldn't even have been close except for a five-run rally, climaxed by Jimmy Foxx's twenty-eighth homer in the ninth.

This doubleheader marked the only competition in either league, but the National circuit reached the headlines when St. Louis Cardinals announced the appointment of Frank Frisch to succeed Gabby Street as manager.

Washington Senators yesterday twice conquered Philadelphia to regain the lead in the American League pennant race with a half-game advantage over the idle New York Yankees. BRITISH NET STARS LOSE

Five Members of Oxford-Cambridge Team Beaten in Tourney at Seabright

Seabright, N.J., July 25.—Some of America's lesser lights in the tennis world gathered a small measure of revenge for their Davis Cup team's defeat by England, by removing five Brits from the forty-sixth annual invitation tournament of the Seabright Cricket and Tennis Club in the first round yesterday.

The downfall of the youths from across the Atlantic, all members of the touring Oxford-Cambridge team, and Helen Jacobs losing one set in opening the defence of the bowl she won last year, were the only happenings that ranked above the steady stream of seeded players in both men's and women's divisions into the second round.

Of the half-dozen Englishmen, only G. C. Frank was able to pull through into the second round. He defeated Edward W. Burns, New York, 6-4, 6-2.

Veteran Uhle Is Signed By Yanks

New York, July 25.—New York Yankees yesterday signed George Uhle, veteran Cleveland and Detroit right-hander, to a contract. To make room for Uhle on the roster, the Yankees sent Johnny Broaca, former Yale pitching star, to the Newark Bears, of the International League, on option.

In the last few weeks strenuous players have broken the golf marathon record. Bob Swanson, Los Angeles pro, played two hundred holes in one day at Sunset Fields, a flat course. He averaged 70 strokes per round, a remarkable score. Jim Ford of Portland, Oregon, then broke this record with a match of 225 holes in one day. He had the advantage over Swanson because he was so much farther north that the summer days were a great deal longer. His average score was 81.6 strokes, also very low. He was supposed to have walked 43.7 miles, but I have an idea it was a good deal more than that. I wore a pedometer to see how far a man walks in playing a round of golf, and a number of times I registered over twenty miles for fifty-four holes.

Of course I was not averaging any seventy-nine strokes, or eighty-one either, for that matter, and those miles included climbing into bunkers and ditches, circling in the woods for lost balls, and travels back and forth across the fairway. At that rate Jim Ford would have gone some eighty-six miles. That would have been something.

That proves, anyhow, that it is harder to play golf than good golf. They should be able to beat this record in Scotland, where the sun shines far into the night and gets up incredibly early in the morning. It is something of a shock for an American to play in the land of the McTavishes, since he can go out for a pleasant eighteen holes after dinner, and the caddy, taking his clubs on the first tee, says: "Nice night to-night, sir!" Big Fellows Again Ruling Scramble In Heavyweight Group

Carnera, Champ, and Baer, Leading Contender, Two Modern Giants

Pair Should Draw Tremendous Gate

Missed Putts Costly to Guldahl and Shute; Japanese Prove Great Swimmers

By ROBERT EDGREN

It is the era of big men again. Carnera, the champion, is the biggest man in the ring, and Baer, the leading contender, is one of the biggest, strongest fighters in years. For a time it looked as though Schmeling, Walker, Stripling and a number of small heavyweights were going to dominate the game.

The smashing upstart dealt to Sharkey by Carnera alters the future of the heavyweight scramble in an interesting way. Both the champion and the leading contender, Baer, can stand up under heavy punching; both have a knockout wallop; neither is the defence, dancing type.

The only spectacular thing Sharkey did with the title was to lose it. Sharkey and Schmeling could now get together in another fifteen-round, jabbing contest for the title of "the forgotten man."

After Carnera fights Baer, if he does, Italy should be able to pay back the war debt. The gate for that scrap will be the largest for many years, possibly even the greatest ever. And Primo would get the champion's share! I wonder what his creditors think about that bankruptcy petition now?

EXPERTS HAVE THEIR TROUBLES

The poor duffer will get some consolation out of the fact that two leading professional golfers each lost an opportunity for fame by failing to get a hole-in-one. First, Ralph Guldahl (who two years ago was one of the greatest putters in professional ranks) missed a four-footer on the last green to tie for the United States Open Championship. Then Benmore Shute, with a four-foot putt to give the United States team a tie with Great Britain in the Ryder-Cup match, did not quite get the ball down. Shute is known as a marvelous putter.

They all miss them.

Bill Burke, who was all but left off the team, and who would have been left off but for the storm of public criticism which arose when golf fans found out he was not on the squad, came through with a helping hand in the only win that the United States scored in the foursomes. He showed once more that he is a great player under pressure.

JAPANESE GREAT SWIMMERS

Another swimming record has gone to Japan. Shozo Makino broke the world's 800-meter record in a Tokyo meet. He already holds the 100-meter record. The Japanese have remarkable physical build which enables them to do wonders in swimming, but forces them to lag behind in running. They have a great endurance, three Japanese finished in the first nine in the Olympic marathon—no three of any other nation did as well) and great muscle spring (they hold the world's record in the broadjump and hop-and-and-jump), but those short legs seem to slow them up.

The International Boxing Union had a meeting at Rome recently and decided that championship bouts must have at least fifteen rounds. This is a fine rule. Any shorter bouts makes the championship a joke. A man has little chance to prove that he is a better fighter than a speedy, dancing champ if the bout doesn't go on long enough to get either man winded. Demanding short championship bouts, as some states have done, is like requesting the amateur golfers to play off the national title in nine-hole matches. The opponents don't have a chance to win, and the champion's chief worry is trying to avoid some terrible mistake that would cause them to lose the encounter without a chance to make a comeback.

GOLF MARATHONS

Two players in the last few weeks strenuous players have broken the golf marathon record. Bob Swanson, Los Angeles pro, played two hundred holes in one day at Sunset Fields, a flat course. He averaged 70 strokes per round, a remarkable score. Jim Ford of Portland, Oregon, then broke this record with a match of 225 holes in one day. He had the advantage over Swanson because he was so much farther north that the summer days were a great deal longer. His average score was 81.6 strokes, also very low. Of course I was not averaging any seventy-nine strokes, or eighty-one either, for that matter, and those miles included climbing into bunkers and ditches, circling in the woods for lost balls, and travels back and forth across the fairway. At that rate Jim Ford would have gone some eighty-six miles. That would have been something.

BREAKS RECORD

Joe De Maggio, eighteen-year-old right-fielder for the San Francisco Seals of the Coast League, established a new consecutive game hitting record by batting safely in fifty straight games. It is quite remarkable in the fact that it is De Maggio's first year in professional baseball. The former league record of safe hits in forty-nine successive games was set eighteen years ago by Jack Ness, first baseman of the Oakland club. De Maggio is a San Francisco boy and baseball critics rate him the best hitter in the circuit since Paul Waner. At present he is hitting .330 for the season.

Westland Leading In Western Golf

Memphis, Tenn., July 25.—Shooting a 71, one over par, despite the fact he was forced to play the last three holes in a driving rainstorm, Jack Westland, Chicago, swept into the first round leadership of the qualifying test of the western amateur golf championship.

Westland had a sub-par 33 in the first nine.

THE BIG SIX

Jimmy Foxx's twenty-eighth home run of the season was his only hit yesterday and as the result the Athletics' slugger first baseman lost five points in his battle with Al Simmons for the batting leadership of the American League. The slump dropped Foxx to 355, only two points in front of Joe Cronin, who connected safely only three times in ten trips to the plate during a double-header. The other members of the Big Six were idle.

BADGES FOR BIG ROOSEVELT PLAN

Associated Press

Washington, July 25.—President Roosevelt, yesterday evening called upon employers who enroll in the national recovery campaign to display the "Badge of Honor"—insignia of the industrial recovery.

"In war, in the gloom of night attack," he said, "soldiers wear a bright badge on their shoulders to be sure comrades do not fire on comrades. On that principle, those who cooperate in this programme must know each other at a glance."

"That is why we have provided a badge of honor for this purpose, a simple design which the legend 'We do our part' and I ask that all those who join me shall display that badge prominently. It is essential to our purpose."

Within an hour after the President had spoken receipt of more than 300 telegraphic responses to his appeal for voluntary enlistment behind the national campaign for shorter work hours and higher wages was reported at the White House.

Dorothy Dix's Letter Box

Noted Doctor Gives Scientific Backing to Dorothy Dix's Anti-reducing Plea — Conscience-stricken Wife Wonders Whether to Tell Husband of Her Past

DEAR MISS DIX—I was very much interested in the letter of the young man who expressed his opinion of skinny girls, and I desire to express my gratitude to you for your very timely, extremely practical and scientifically accurate comments on a most vital problem that is either ignored or dismissed from attention with a mere gesture.

Would that girls would heed it. It might be instrumental in preventing many thousands of cases of avoiding tuberculosis and untold family unhappiness. Also, a campaign against starving one's self into self-destruction would prevent the filling of many graveyards.

In my special work on ductless-gland diseases I have referred to me by other physicians many cases of thyroid disorder in the form of marked under-functioning and marked over-functioning directly traceable to the unwanted weight-reducing mania. The ductless glands, especially the thyroid, are either whipped up or more commonly depressed, occasionally thrown out of all balance by the lack of pabulum, which they require for normal functioning. It must not be forgotten that the functions of the vegetative, or involuntary nervous system, are dovetailed, as it were, with the ductless-gland system, so that the clinical picture becomes rather complicated in a case of this sort. Last but not least, how can we expect the mentality of the individual to be in proper balance?

And so we are occasionally faced with the sad spectacle of a complicated mental aberration varying from incapacity for the enjoyment of proper social intercourse to a definite form of insanity in one who only a short time previous had been a perfect picture of physical and mental health—all because of the insupportable desire to become a living skeleton.

Medical science has shown that a healthy layer of adipose tissue surrounding the bony frame and muscular structure of an individual is the best baffle against melancholia, constipation, edgy nerves and poor health in general. I am not arguing in favor of obesity. I am simply stating the fact that five pounds too much is far preferable to underweight, even in the slightest degree. When we are faced, as we are now, with the scourge, or epidemic, of ruthless self-extermination through voluntary starvation, the vocabulary falls short of supplying adjectives sufficient to condemn the folly of the individuals concerned.

Answer: This letter is written by one of the most eminent scientists in the world, and I give it in full, hoping that it will be a warning to some girl who is wrecking her health and shortening her days in her determination to keep a stringbean figure.

Just how far this mania for being nothing but a rack of bones has taken our silly little nincompoop daughters, I had forcibly impressed upon me the other day when I was standing near a weighing machine in a big department store. A group of six or eight girls, one after the other, ascended the scales. Not one of them weighed as much as 100 pounds, although all of them were around 5 feet 5 or 6 inches. The most obese of them all weighed 98 pounds, over which they all exclaimed in horror and began advising her upon reducing diets.

As I looked at them with their vertebra knobs sticking out of their low-backed gowns, I wondered first why they considered a living skeleton the ideal of beauty to which they sacrificed themselves. For not one of them but what would have been a hundred times better looking if she had had curves instead of being a futuristic design of angles, angles, and angles. If her face had had the softness and dimples and contentment that are the result of being well fed instead of having the hatchet-like contour and the strained sour look of the famished.

And then I thought that in the midst of plenty these girls were starving just as much as are the Chinese or the Indians or any other of the poor creatures whose crops have failed and who are living on roots and herbs and leaves. For only a few days before a friend of mine had given a big luncheon—a group of debutantes—and she told me that her beautiful meal went off at the table virtually unattended. The only things the girls ate was a bit of clear soup and the olives, so afraid were they of getting fat.

And, lastly, I thought what a tragedy that in their folly these girls are totally unfitting themselves for life. If they go into business their poor, undernourished bodies cannot stand the strain of daily hard work. For success comes only to the woman who has no nerves nor back and who does not go to pieces nor have a headache under the grind of daily toil. If they marry, they cannot give their children the most precious gift that a mother can bestow upon her offspring, a sound and vigorous constitution, abounding health and buoyant vitality. All that these starved girls can be will be that curse of childhood, a sickly mother and a wife who is a perpetual doctor's bill to her husband.

Read what this famous doctor says, girls, and tuck in the first decent meal you have had in years.

DOROTHY DIX.

DEAR DOROTHY DIX—About four years ago I was engaged to a boy with whom I thought I was much in love, and during the year and a half that we went together we lived as man and wife. Finally we broke off and met and fell really in love with a fine man. I married him without telling him of my past. Now the boy is also married and I am tormented with fear that he will tell some one, and especially that he will tell his wife and she will gossip about me, and that it will get to my husband. What must I do?

CONSCIENCE-STRICKEN AND WORRIED.

Answer: When we dance we always have to pay the piper. That is what you are doing now, and you are paying for it with your very life's blood.

"The wages of sin is death," says the Good Book, and that is why righteousness pays. For when we do wrong the inexorable justice of fate chalks up the score against us and sooner or later we have to settle it and generally with compound interest in suffering.

Many girls think, as you did, that it is their own affair if they have a liaison with a boy. That is a matter between the two of them, and that if they enjoy their little love nest that is all there is to it. They think they are free to break it up when they get tired of it, and that is the end.

But it is not the end for the woman. Sooner or later she really falls in love and wants to marry. Then comes the terrible problem of whether she should tell the man of her past or not. If she tells him, the chances are, if he is a decent man, that he doesn't want damaged goods. If he is so much in love with her that he marries her in spite of her soiled skirts, he rarely, ever, forgives her or trusts her, and in every family squabble he throws up her past to her.

If she marries him without telling him, she lives with the sword of Damocles hanging over her head, always in terror of his finding out her guilty secret, always afraid that the man who was her fellow sinner will boast of his conquest, always afraid he will tell his wife and she will take her revenge by spreading the scandal.

As to what you should do, my advice is to keep silence. If you did not tell your husband before marriage, don't tell him now and wreck his faith in you and his happiness. And don't humiliate yourself by appealing to your former lover not to tell. If he is a gentleman, he will not blab, and if he is a cad, nothing can stop him.

DOROTHY DIX.

Lindberghs Visit Greenland Coast

Famous Flying Pair Now at Godthaab; Will Spend Two Weeks in Greenland

Colonel Is Object of Hero Worship By Eskimos, Now Air Conscious

Godthaab, Greenland, July 25.—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh intends to stay six weeks in Greenland on the aerial mapping tour he is making with Mrs. Lindbergh in the north country but he does not intend to go either to Iceland, the Faroe Islands or Denmark, he told the Associated Press yesterday evening.

The couple arrived here Saturday from Labrador. He directed the supply ship Jelling to set sail to-day for Holstenborg, on the west coast of Greenland north of where, here he and his wife will join the ship after two days of flights in the Godthaab district.

Holstenborg was favored as an airport by Parker Cramer, United States flier who met death in 1931 while surveying a north Atlantic air route. Col. Lindbergh proposes to make Holstenborg the base for a series of flights over the inland ice in which suitable emergency landing places will be sought. Thereafter the colonel plans to fly northward to Godthaab.

From the latter place the Lindberghs plan to return to Godthaab and thence cross the ice cap to Scoresby Sound, East Greenland, where a gasoline supply provided for Cramer awaits them. The return from Scoresby Sound to Godthaab is planned over the inland ice. The Jelling in the meantime will return to Godthaab, sailing from there to New York.

The Lindberghs expected to return to Hopedale, Labrador, where they landed en route here, by the latter part of August.

The colonel said they propose to return to Greenland in 1934 for further investigations and that they also will visit Iceland and the Faroe Islands.

Col. Lindbergh is the object of ardent hero worship by the Eskimos who have been made air conscious by the numerous flights across the North Atlantic in recent years.

From great distances the Eskimos have traveled and are still coming to Godthaab. Fleets of Eskimo kayaks, or canoes, full of natives of this northern land paddle around the famous flier's plane as the occupants make a close inspection.

The colonel and his wife, in paying official visits to Danish authorities have also dropped in at several Eskimo houses where they have exchanged friendly greetings with the natives.

FIRE DAMAGES POWER YACHT

Vancouver Craft Macard, Ready For Cruise, Bursts Into Flames in Seattle

Seattle, July 25.—H. W. McCurdy, president of the Puget Sound Bridge and Dredging Company, was planning a leisurely cruise of Puget Sound and Alaska waters in the fifty-foot power yacht Macard.

But instead of providing a vacation jaunt for himself and his friends, the yacht Sunday gave thousands of waterfront onlookers the thrill of a spectacular fire.

Roy Dyer was working on the boat, along with the Harbor Island power yacht Macard, when the engine backfired and the vessel burst into flames.

A passing tug towed the yacht away from the dredge.

Engine and hose companies stretched several hundred feet of hose to the end of a dock adjoining the Charles H. Lilly Company, and the tug brought the yacht Sunday gave thousands of waterfront onlookers the thrill of a spectacular fire.

The blaze was not subdued, however, until the fireboat Alki arrived. The vessel belonged to William McKenzie of Vancouver, B.C., and was leased by McCurdy for his vacation cruise.

Damage was estimated at $15,000 to $20,000.

SAYS TRAVEL IS IMPROVING

Walter Pratt of Canadian National Railways Sees Encouraging Signs

Winnipeg, July 25.—Walter Pratt Jr., general manager of Canadian National Railways, arrived in Winnipeg this morning for a few days' business visit from Montreal. On Friday he will continue his journey to the west, visiting the company's hotels at Brandon, Edmonton and Jasper.

Mr. Pratt is delighted over the present tourist prospects at Jasper Park Lodge. "We are ahead of last year and our bookings for August and September are the most encouraging we have had in years. It is not so much a convention that is holding up but the big increase we have noticed in family holidays."

Although the Totem Pole golf week is not until September 3, many well-known players already have sent in entries and with the generally lower rates we are quite confident that this year's event will bring out a larger list of players than the record number of 1932.

The weather has been magnificent in the mountains lately and August looks like a record month," he declared.

WILL EXPLORE SOUTH POLAR REGIONS

Mrs. Lincoln Ellsworth, wife of the famous explorer, is accompanying him on what has been described as the last great venture in south polar exploration.

Ellsworth, Sir Hubert Wilkins and Bernt Balchen will explore by air and dog team the 1,550 miles between Ross Sea and Wedell Sea. Balchen, who piloted Admiral Byrd's plane over the South Pole, will fly the plane while Ellsworth acts as observer and Wilkins as photographer.

Mrs. Ellsworth will remain at the Bay of Whales base with eight other of the expedition's personnel. The expedition will sail from New Zealand about November 1 and plans call for a return in May of next year.

Seattle, July 25.—Repairs to the S. H. F. Alexander, which touched bottom off Point Wilson, at the entrance to Puget Sound, in fog yesterday morning, will be effected within five days, and the ship will be able to take her sailing from here and Victoria for California ports next Tuesday evening, officials of the Pacific Steamship Lines announced this morning.

Meanwhile most of the 560 passengers booked in the northwest for the sailing of the liner to-night for San Francisco and Los Angeles were making other arrangements to return south. As the ship is also booked capacity next week, most of them will return to California by motor car and train. All ships sailing south during the next few weeks have already been sold out.

Passengers who were aboard the "H.F." at the time of her mishap yesterday, reported no confusion, and praise the manner in which Capt. C. G. Hansen and his officers handled the situation. All passengers were called on deck and ordered to don life-preservers as a precautionary measure. Many of the men appeared on deck in their pajamas and overcoats, but returned to their staterooms when the ship proceeded to Seattle. There was no confusion and little excitement because of the fog, it was impossible to see land.

More than 200 passengers were to have embarked aboard the H.F. Alexander here this evening. Many of the passengers have cancelled their passage and will go south later in the season. Californians on the island who must be back will leave this afternoon by the S. S. Princess Margaret and will go south later in the season. Other Californians, who have their cars with them, and who intended to take them on the H.F. will motor south.
